Washingtonians Flock to Beautiful North Shore of Massachusetts for Summer Months.

It is not the fault of the Washingtonians that the North Shore of Massachusetts does not belong entirely to them this summer. They have done their best to take possession of that beautiful coast, and the Washington colony, it is safe to say, will be the largest of any from Lands End on Cape Ann down to Beverly Farms and Montserrat, the last stations before the bustling life of the city begins to encroach upon the peace and serenity of the country.

For years the North Shore of Massachusetts has been known to the Bostonians, many of whom have had cottages and villas along its rocky coast or nestled among the hills of its rolling and woody country, but it is comparatively recent years that this delightful section of New England has become known to any outsiders; in fact, with true New England exclusiveness, the people of the Hub tried to keep this neighborhood just to themselves. It is too beautiful and too delightful in climate, however, to rest unknown, and now that its attractions have become known to the people of other sections of the country, they are flocking there in increasing numbers every year.

Soon after its invasion by other than the Bostonians, the greatest number of summer sojourners came from Pittsburg. In fact, if the name of any resident was unknown it was quite safe to affirm that he or she came from the Smoky City, so numerous were the people from that part of Pennsylvania.

For the last two or three years society people from here have become aware of the beauties of the North Shore, and each year they have gone there in ever-growing numbers. This year the Washingtonians will outnumber any other group of persons from any other section.

Ever since the former Spanish Minister, the Duke d'Arcos, and his American wife, who was the beautiful Miss Lowery, settled in Manchester-by-the-Sea, taking a cottage every season for twelve or fourteen years, that section has been more or less well known to the members of the diplomatic corps, and they have gone there in larger or smaller numbers every summer. Four or five years ago there were no less than six different embassies and legations in Manchester, the most there has ever been excepting last summer, when an equal number or more were established, not in one town as in the previous case, but scattered along the coast.

The Italian Embassy has returned with never varying faithfulness each year since the first, some four years ago, when Baron Mayor des Planches leased the pretty little cottage on School street, which the previous year had been the French Embassy with M. and Mme. de Margerie as its occupants.

Signor Montagna, as charge d'affaires of the embassy, has this summer taken a cottage in Windemere Place, near the Essex Country Club, known throughout New England as possessing the finest golf links of any of the country clubs. Here Signor Montagna and his colleagues, Signors Centaro and Cora, will board, the club, like all clubs, being open to the diplomats as honorary members.

The Italians do not play golf, but they are keen over tennis, and every day some time during the twenty-four hours get in a set or two of this game. They are also fond of the bathing, and every morning take their dip with the rest at Massacombe Beach.

The highest ranking diplomats on the shore this summer will be the Russian Ambassador and the Baroness Rosen, who have returned to Magnolia each year since they came to this country. On their arrival in this country three years ago, it being July, they were in Washington just long enough to receive the courtesies with Count Cassini, the retiring Ambassador, and for the Ambassador to present his credentials to the State Department.

They then left immediately for Magnolia, where they had leased the Coolidge cottage, made vacant by its owner, Mr. T. Jefferson Coolidge, Jr., moving into his new million dollar marble palace, farther out on the point. They returned last summer, and now again they are ensconced there with their Lanes and Penates and corps of servants for another season.

With the Ambassador are M. Kroupensky and M. de Thal. The latter has chambers at the club, and uses his new runabout to convey him back and forth from the club to the embassy. Prince Koudacheff, now on leave in Russia, will be in August, and will be at the Dolphin. Mrs. Burton Harrison, who has taken a house, which has suites of bachelor apartments connected with it.

The Peruvian Minister and Mme. Pardo have taken "Over Lodge," the beautiful estate of Mrs. Lane, just on the border line between Manchester and Magnolia.

The Siamese Legation, as for years, will be at Bass Rocks, beyond Gloucester, the members of the staff being frequent visitors to the tchoussat at Magnolia for the cup that cheers.

The Argentine Minister and Mme. Portela, who, like the Russians, first became acquainted with this country at Magnolia, will return there for their second summer; the intervening summer last season they spent abroad. They and their sons, Señors Don Julian and Don Manuel Portela, will be at the Oceanic Hotel, at Magnolia, this summer.

Besides the diplomats there are many residents of Washington, who have already, or will, in the near future, transfer their habitation to the North Shore.

The Postmaster General and Mrs. Meyer have for years had a place at Hamilton, called Rock Maple Farm. Of course, they were abroad for years, while Mr. Meyer was Ambassador to Rome, but now they are ensconced in their own summer home on the North Shore with their daughters, the Misses Meyer.

The Meyers, like every one else in that section, are members of the Myopia Hunt Club, where the horse show is held every Labor Day, blooded horses from all the North Shore being entered by New Yorkers, Bostonians, Philadelphians, and persons from the West, with some from Washington. Among the latter are the thoroughbreds of Mr. Clarence Moore, who, with Mrs. Moore, will as usual spend the summer at "Swiftmoor," the beautiful estate of Mrs. Moore's mother, Mrs. Swift, of Chicago, at Prides.

"Swiftmoor" is one of the show places of the North Shore, and Mrs. Moore is one of the handsomest women of the summer colony.

While the Duke of the Abruzzi was on his recent visit to Boston he was entertained by the Bostonians, and Mrs. Meyer, who gave a dinner and reception for him at Rock Maple Farm, Secretary Meyer also took the duke to the Myopia Club, where he proved himself quite an expert at shooting clay pigeons.

Near the Meyers' place at Hamilton is another cottage owned by them, and this they leased last summer to the Belgian Minister and the Baroness Moncheur. The Minister and his attractive American wife are abroad now, but he has released the cottage at Hamilton for the Belgian Minister, who is again at Magnolia, as for two past summers. He is, as usual, at the Magnolia Hotel.

Dr. and Mrs. Roland Cotton Smith are in the same neighborhood, they having a cottage at the adjoining place, Ipswich.

Other Washingtonians at Hamilton are Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Williams, members of the set here, known as the "Sixth Avenue colony," from the fact that Mr. Williams, like several other millionaires here, made his fortune in the mines of South Africa. They closed their new home here early in June and went to Hamilton for the summer.

Senator Kean, of New Jersey, and his mother and sisters have a place at Prides, formerly known as Prides Crossing, now just "Prides."

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, Jr., the latter formerly Miss Marie L. Mattingly, of Washington, have arrived at their place at Prides, "Elmetwaite," for the summer.

Every one who knows the North Shore at all is familiar with Eaglehead, at Manchester, the beautiful estate of the late Senator from Michigan and Mrs. McMillan, one of the largest and loveliest places along the coast. Mrs. McMillan is there with her daughter, Miss Amy McMillan, who has just returned with her niece, Miss Grace Jarvis, from Europe. Miss Jarvis is a debutante and one of the popular girls of the shore.

A mile farther along toward Magnolia is the woody road which turns into "Windcliffe," the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Boardman. This beautiful home is situated on top of a hill overlooking the grounds of the Essex Club and the surrounding country, with a glimpse of the sea from the piazza. Miss Mabel Boardman, who has been abroad at the Red Cross conference, has just returned to Windcliffe, and later in the summer the younger daughter of the family, Mrs. Murray Crane, with her husband, Senator Crane, and their infant son, will visit Mr. and Mrs. Boardman.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Padelford have owned for some time a pretty place at Beverly Farms, which they are occupying this summer, after several summers abroad. Mr. Padelford's daughter, Florence Chase, who makes her home in London, is engaged to a young English nobleman and will therefore, after marriage, continue to live at the British capital as now.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry May are also at Beverly Farms this summer and have with them their son and daughter, Mr. Henry May, Jr., and Miss Isabelle May.

Mrs. Moore, wife of Gen. John Moore, U. S. A., is another Washingtonian on the North Shore. She is at Gloucester.

Paymaster Samuel Lawrence Heap, U. S. N., and his bride, who was until a few weeks ago Mrs. Violet Beale Bloomer, are also at Gloucester, and with them is Mrs. Heap's daughter, Miss Pansy Bloomer.

Gen. and Mrs. Anson Mills are at Bass Rocks, just beyond Gloucester, for the summer.

Of course, Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Norman, of Boston and Washington, have places on the North Shore, having been identified with the life of the cottage colony for years.

Around Manchester and Magnolia will be the greatest number of Washington people.

Mr. and Mrs. William Slater, of I street, and their debutante daughter, Eleanor, are at Manchester, as is also Mrs. Titian Coffey and her granddaughters, the Misses Chase, the sister of whom, Miss Evelyn, is a debutante last winter, having been introduced at a tea at her grandmother's house in K street.

Mr. and Mrs. James Barbour and family are elsewhere from the Capital who are summering in this section. They are at Magnolia, as are also Mr. and Mrs. Ford Thompson, Jr., bride and groom of the spring, who have taken a suite of rooms at the Dolphin.

Mr. and Mrs. Piquette Mitchell will also be at Magnolia this season, and Mrs. T. DeWitt Talmage and her daughter, Miss Rebecca Collier, are again at the Oceanic at Magnolia for the third summer.

Other habitués there are Col. Francis Colton and his daughter, Miss Daisy Colton. Miss Marjorie Colton is traveling with her brother, Col. George Colton, home on leave of absence. In August she will join the family at Magnolia.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Simpson are also at the Magnolia, as are Mrs. William Southernland and her daughters, the Misses Southernland.

Miss Errol Brown, who has spent one or two summers at Magnolia, will be there again this season, visiting friends.

Miss Helen Foulke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Foulke, of Massachusetts avenue, and Miss Helen Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bell, are other young members of Capital society who will be at Magnolia this season.

A Washington bride who will summer at Magnolia is Mrs. William P. F. Closen, who was Mrs. Grace Gailaudet Kendall.

dall, daughter of Prof. Gallaudet, of Kendall Green. They were married here this spring, and as Mr. Clossen has a studio at Magnolia, he is again there this summer, as for years past, and naturally his bride is with him. The Clossen studio is at the corner of Hesperus avenue and Legation lane, and is one of the attractive spots at which to linger on one's way to the beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Hutchinson are other Washingtonians who are to spend the summer at Magnolia.

Mr. Alfredo Alvarez, Calderon, formerly of the Peruvian Legation, and son of the former Minister, is again at Magnolia, as for two past summers. He is, as usual, at the Magnolia Hotel.

Miss Mabel Merriam, daughter of the former Director of the Census, whose engagement to Mr. John Wheelwright, of Boston, was recently announced, is another resident from here who will visit on the North Shore this summer, and Mr. and Mrs. John F. Stevens are others who will spend the summer.

At Eastern Point, Nahant, is the summer home of Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge. The Senator and his son, in order that the former may have an absolute rest, have gone to Tuckernuck Island, off the coast, for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. O'Laughlin have gone to Bass Rocks for a few weeks.

The announcement of the engagement of Mr. Henry Elliott Waggonman, of Washington and Annapolis, to Miss Viola Powell Roup, is a matter of interest to the many friends of the young couple. Miss Roup is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Roup, of Bridgeton, N. J., and met her fiancé while making a protracted stay in Silver City, N. Mex., where Mr. Waggonman had been ordered in search of health.

Mr. Waggonman is a Princeton man, class of 1900, and the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Floyd Waggonman, of Washington. Subsequent to taking his degree as electrical engineer, in 1902, young Mr. Waggonman entered the Westinghouse shops in Pittsburg, being later transferred to a responsible position in Baltimore, where intense application brought about a physical breakdown, causing his temporary retirement from business activity. It is a source of happiness to his large circle of friends that not only has his ordered rest been in every way a health restorative, but also the means of providing him with a helpmeet for the future. Though no definite date has been fixed for the wedding, it is understood that the ceremony will be an event of the early autumn.
